

OnCall Learning Systems Founder and President to speak at Meditech User Conference, announces addition of Business Development Officer.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Virginia --- April 11, 2003

Welby Watkins, RN will speak at The Medical Users Software Exchange's 2003 International MUSE Conference (museweb.org) being held in Anaheim, California May 7-10, 2003. Her presentation will address the substantial ROI to be achieved using computer based training (CBT) solutions in lieu of more traditional instructor led classroom training. CBT, optimized for the clinical environment, has been demonstrated to not only be more cost effective than instructor led, but is also frequently more efficacious due to the hands on experiential nature of the solution.

Ms. Watkins, a licensed medical professional and computer systems analysis and design expert, will cite specifics from a case study of a major clinical institution's CBT experience. "CBT solutions, optimized for a major New England hospital system, enabled them to reduce training cycle time, including improving allied healthcare worker FTE utilization, and saved some $400,000 in the process". Her remarks will overview how management can best maintain and enhance the knowledge of their clinical staff through a combination of custom/semi-custom and generic training solutions delivered via the CBT methodology.

OnCall Learning Systems announced today it has named Tony von Thelen as its new Vice President of Business Development. Prior to joining the company, Mr. von Thelen held leadership positions at FedEx and FacilityPro. He brings twenty years of sales management, strategic business development and marketing experience to the company. "Tony has a wealth of valuable knowledge and experience that he brings to our company at a time of high growth and market expansion for OnCall Learning Systems. His background with both Fortune 100 and start-up organizations adds further intellectual capital to our team," said Welby H. Watkins, Founder and President of OnCall Learning Systems. Mr. von Thelen will be responsible for strategic customer acquisition, marketing and alliances.

OnCall Learning Systems, a privately held and funded corporation, is based in Charlottesville, Virginia.

About OnCall Learning Systems

OnCall Learning Systems is the leading provider of CBT solutions for Meditech HCIS. The company uses state-of-the-art development tools to create, develop and produce a variety of interactive computer based training solutions that encompass the broad spectrum of Health Care Information Systems from Meditech Information Technology, Inc, Meditech. OnCall Learning employees have an impressive skill set and extensive knowledge base of clinical environments.

OnCall Learning Systems has customers in major markets across the USA where the company's training solutions are used for new deployment, new hire, recurrent and upgrade education.

For more information, please visit www.OnCallLearning.com or call 434.984.3165. Education Where You Want It, When You Need It(sm)